Change to RFP Process

We received a number of suggestion about the RFP process and based on these suggestions we have streamlined the process. Previously we have been sending two emails to the supplier, one confirming that the buyer has accepted the quote and then a follow-up with the actual order. This has caused confusion as some suppliers had been acting on the first email and then not getting the actual order as the buyer had not checked it out through the basket.

We have now changed the process so that supplier will only receive the email which contains the actual order email. We hope that this will mean that there can be no confusion at the supplier end as to which email they need to act on.

NEPP concludes majority of eProcurement still to happen

A review of the current situation in public sector eProcurement carried out by the National eProcurement Programme (NePP) has identified that the vast bulk of public sector implementation has still to happen. A special supplement has been published by 'Local Government IT in Use' (LGITU) magazine to coincide with the transformational - Government conference in Central London 6th-7th December - at which @UK is speaking.
